

While at-home moms in the past may have used some old-fashioned gumption to jump start their playgroups, today's new moms have technology on their side. Thanks to the Internet and a burgeoning group of playgroup experts—there now are Web sites, books and guides—all with ideas and resources to help parents create their own playgroups.

This article from United Parenting Publications feature many quotes and tips from Carren W. Joye. Read the entire article at http://www.parenthood.com/article-topics/how_to_start_and_run_a_successful_playgroup.html
